CIA Booth Has Fake Marijuana

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23
(UPI) — The Central Intelligence Agency booth on drug abuse won first prize at the American Medical Association convention — despite a bag of ersatz marijuana.

The booth, originally created by CIA doctors for parents who work for the agency, warned of drug dangers, showed examples of narcotics and gave off the smell of marijuana.

But doctors who manned the booth said the contents of the bag labeled as marijuana were not real — although a bag of the weed normally hangs on the display.

They said federal narcotics agents had warned them that transporting marijuana across state lines was illegal — even for the CIA.

One doctor's wife who is a high school bus monitor in a San Francisco suburb, smelled the burning substance several times, paused, then sniffed it again.

"That smells just like the back of my bus," she said.
